Summary:

In the New Testament, God considers our belief as obedience; correspondingly, He sees unbelief as disobedience. If we are still stuck in religious tradition, we must renew our minds to the current new-covenant definition of what it means to obey if we want to experience blessings. Believing in God's love for us, as expressed through Christ, results in positive change in ourselves. Our trust in Him is authenticated when we reach that point where we have peace and can rest.

Notes:

1. Under the law, man was only blessed through perfect performance; however, no one could keep all the commandments to perform perfectly. Under grace, we no longer have to toil or perform; we're now blessed because of Jesus.
2. Under the new covenant, God equates disobedience with unbelief. If we don't believe in Jesus and in what He did for us, we won't be able to enter the place of rest God wants for us.
3. What matters is not our lifestyle, but our belief system; what we believe directly influences our behavior.
4. The finished works of Jesus, and believing the love God displayed through Christ, is the solution to toxic emotions, failure, and all areas of wrong behavior.
5. A relationship with Jesus Christ allows us to bring forth fruit; He gives us life and light. Jesus has qualified us to live without sin and walk in step with His Spirit in us. He has rescued us from sinful, disobedient living.
