Summary:

We all experience emotions every day, but we don't need to allow them to move us away from God's will for our lives. We've been given authority over our feelings; they don't have authority over us. The battle we fight is in our minds, and we either win or lose based on how well we exercise self-control over our emotions.

Notes:

1. God wants emotional prosperity for us, which is the ability to control our feelings. We're strong when we display emotional restraint.
2. We need Jesus if we are to control our emotions; our own ability isn't enough. What goes on in our minds is the determining factor.
3. Negative thoughts may pass through our minds, but we don't have to entertain them; we have authority over our thoughts. Self-control is a force God designed to direct our lives where He wants them to go.
4. Christ is our perfect example; He had emotions but always remained in control of them. Jesus never yielded to temptation.
